Grammar & Vocabulary

1. D — "quickly" describes how the fox darted.
2. The children's coats were hung on the pegs.
3. D (age-old)
4. A, C, E — London, Tuesday and Everest are all proper nouns.
5. "Me and him went to the park on Saturday" → "He and I went to the park on Saturday." (correct pronoun order/case and capitalise Saturday)
6. B — a semicolon joins two independent, related clauses without a conjunction.
7. brought
8. B (stingy)
9. B, D — these are grammatically correct; A, C and E contain verb-agreement/tense errors.
10. "Watch out!" shouted Nadia. "The ice is thin."
11. C — "Although it was raining" is the subordinate clause.
12. B (definitely)
13. A, C, D — flock, herd and committee are collective nouns; sheep and run are not.
14. B (pair)
15. C — future perfect ("will have finished").

Punctuation & Sentence Craft

16. The new trees were planted along the avenue by the council.
17. The museum, which opened in 1920, houses ancient Egyptian artefacts.
18. A (scant) best conveys evidence that is insufficient/barely adequate, which best fits a detective needing to "reach a conclusion" carefully despite limited evidence (accept a reasoned justification for another close choice such as C with correct reasoning).
19. A, B, D — each uses the colon correctly to introduce a list or explanation; C and E incorrectly use a colon before a simple object list.
20. "The list of items on the shelf were very long" → "The list of items on the shelf was very long." (the subject is "list", singular)
21. e.g. "The library, which usually opens at nine, was closed."
22. B (im-)
23. e.g. "murmured", "breathed", "hissed"
24. B, C, E — correct subjunctive/conditional forms; A and D contain common errors ("was" instead of "were"; "would have known" instead of "had known").
25. We packed sandwiches, apples, crisps and juice for the picnic.
26. A metaphor — the exam is directly described as being a mountain.
27. e.g. "Running for the bus, I got soaked as the rain fell on my coat." (the modifier "Running for the bus" must describe the person, not the rain)
28. D (miserable) — the odd one out, as the others all mean happy/delighted.
29. A, C, D — each repeats an initial consonant sound across nearby words.
30. "Their going to there house to get they're bags" → "They're going to their house to get their bags."

Proofreading & Figurative Language

31. Maya said that she had already finished her project.

32. In A, the commas show the clause is extra, non-essential information — the speaker has only one brother. In B, without commas, the clause is essential/defining — it implies there is more than one brother and specifies which one.

33. B, E — in B the modifier describes "the water" rather than a person, and in E it is ambiguous whether "the bike" was left in the rain, but if the subject matches the action it can be correct; accept B as the clearest dangling modifier (full credit for identifying B; partial credit for reasoned inclusion of E).

34. A: "that" is a conjunction/relative pronoun introducing a subordinate clause. B: "that" is a demonstrative adjective/determiner describing "cake".

35. A — the semicolon correctly joins two independent clauses without a conjunction.

36. "I don't want no dessert tonight" → "I don't want any dessert tonight." (removing the double negative)

37. B, C, E — these use the homophones correctly; A should be "They're" and D should be "its".

38. The metaphor personifies time as a thief, suggesting that time takes away youth gradually and irreversibly, just as a thief steals without being noticed. (No further figurative device is required, but personification may also be noted.)

39. The children's teacher, Mr Patel, said that the trip was cancelled; however, the class party would still go ahead.

40. The informal fillers "like" and "and stuff" should be removed; e.g. "The results were exceptionally impressive."

41. C (a significant amount of)

42. A, C, D — correct apostrophe use; B should be "It's" and E should be "The cat's toy".

43. The old pier was destroyed by a violent storm.

44. "Literally" means "exactly as stated", but it is often misused to mean "figuratively" for emphasis, e.g. incorrect: "I literally died laughing" (did not actually die); correct: "The bridge literally collapsed into the river" (it actually did).

45. Errors: "have" should be "has" (subject "Each" is singular) and "essay's" should be "essays" (plural, not possessive). Corrected: "Each of the students has handed in their essays."

Homework Worksheet — Answers

Grammar & Vocabulary

1. C — "beneath" shows the relationship between the treasure and the tree.
2. "Where's my blue jumper?" asked Tom.
3. C (courageous)
4. A, C, E — "happily", "soon" and "carefully" are adverbs; "happy" and "quick" are adjectives.
5. "She has less books than me" → "She has fewer books than me." ("fewer" for countable nouns)
6. B — "It's raining again." (contraction of "it is")
7. written
8. C (opaque)
9. A, C — "fewer" is correct for countable nouns (biscuits, people); "less" is used for uncountable nouns like water.
10. The recipe needs flour, sugar, butter and eggs.
11. B — "we took the long way home" is the main clause.
12. A (necessary)
13. A, C, E — happiness, freedom and courage are abstract nouns.
14. A (accept)
15. A — past perfect ("had already left"), showing an action completed before another past action.

Punctuation & Sentence Craft

16. A three-course meal was prepared for the guests by the chef.
17. The bakery on the corner, which my grandmother loves, sells fresh bread daily.
18. B (detailed) best fits a witness account that is thorough, as opposed to vague/short/quick/brief.
19. A, B, D — correctly introduce a list or explanation; C and E incorrectly place a colon before a simple object list.
20. "Each of the dogs were barking" → "Each of the dogs was barking." ("Each" is singular)
21. e.g. "The teacher praised the essay, which had taken hours to write."
22. B (-less)
23. e.g. "limped", "hobbled", "shuffled"
24. A, C — correct conditional forms; B, D and E contain common errors ("would have studied" should be "had studied"; "would have told" vs "had known… would have told" is fine but D as written is acceptable too — mark A and C as the clearest correct forms; E uses incorrect "would of").
25. The shopping list included apples, bananas, oranges and grapes.
26. A metaphor — her voice is directly described as being music.
27. e.g. "Jamie's little sister, covered in chocolate, ate the cake happily." (the modifier must describe the sister, not be left dangling at the start referring to the wrong noun)
28. C (tiny) — the odd one out, as the others all mean very large.
29. A, C, E — buzz, crash and sizzle imitate real sounds.
30. "Its a shame the weather effected are plans" → "It's a shame the weather affected our plans."

Standard / Advanced

31. Leo said that he would finish his homework the next day.
32. In A, the commas show that revising applied to all the students (non-essential/additional information). In B, without commas, the clause is essential — it specifies that only the students who had revised passed, implying others did not revise and may not have passed.
33. "Neither the manager or the staff was available" → "Neither the manager nor the staff was available." ("neither" pairs with "nor", not "or")

34. A: "fast" is an adjective describing "runner". B: "fast" is an adverb describing how he ran.
35. B — the semicolon correctly joins two independent, related clauses.
36. e.g. "The explorers walked through the jungle and found a cave. Stepping inside, they discovered old paintings on the walls."
37. B, D — grammatically standard without double negatives; A, C and E all contain double negatives.
38. The simile compares the groaning floorboards to a tired old man, suggesting the house is old and creaky, almost as if it has human-like weariness; it creates a sense of age and discomfort.
39. The teacher's instructions were clear: bring a pencil, a ruler and a rubber.
40. The informal/vague words "basically" and "stuff" and "a lot" should be replaced; e.g. "The data shows a significant increase."
41. Errors: "I" should be "me" (object of preposition "between you and") and "then" should be "than" (comparison). Corrected: "Between you and me, the exam was harder than last year."
42. Archaeologists discovered the ancient manuscript in a sealed chamber.
43. "Who" and "Whom" are confused because both refer to people, but "who" is a subject pronoun and "whom" is an object pronoun; since "responsible" needs a subject, the sentence should read: "Who is responsible for locking the gate?"
44. Errors: "lead" should be "led" (past tense of "lead"); "there" should be "their" (possessive); "who's" should be "whose" (possessive, not "who is"). Corrected: "The team was led by their captain, whose confidence never wavered."
45. e.g. "The weather forecast was wrong: it had promised sun all day, but it rained from lunchtime." (colon correctly introduces the explanation; "said" improved to "promised")
