Writing Technique

Year 4 Pt 2 — Mark Scheme — Lesson Worksheet & Homework (tutor copy)

Lesson Worksheet — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. C — personification (fire "danced")

2. alliteration

3. onomatopoeia (clanging)

4. B — Her eyes sparkled like emeralds

5. Example: "The tower stood as tall as a giant's ladder."

6. onomatopoeia — "croaked" and "ribbited" imitate the real sounds frogs make

7. "devoured" — shows how eagerly and quickly he ate, more vivid than the plain verb "ate"

8. A — Cheeky chimps chattered cheerfully

9. A and D (trees "bent their heads"; the sea "swallowed" — human actions given to non-human things)

10. B — "The cake oozed with rich, gooey chocolate" — uses a powerful verb and sensory detail rather than the plain, vague description

11. onomatopoeia

12. Example: "The street was a river of people." (accept any valid metaphor)

13. A — Under the bright stars, they camped

14. personification (waves "reached out and grabbed")

15. B and D ("glorious" and "magnificent" are precise, vivid adjectives; "nice" and "good" are plain, overused adjectives)

Standard

1. Alliteration is repeating the same starting sound in nearby words (e.g. "wild winds whipped"); onomatopoeia is a word that imitates the sound it describes (e.g. "bang", "hiss"). They are different techniques, though they can appear together.

2. C — The playground was a zoo

3. Onomatopoeia — "creaked" imitates the real sound of the floor, adding atmosphere

4. Example: "The cat leapt across the fence." / "The cat darted across the fence."

5. C — Leo's eyelids drooped and his head nodded forward (shows physical signs of tiredness)

6. A and C (sizzled and slammed imitate real sounds; B and D are plain statements)

7. Example: "The old ship groaned and sighed as it rocked on the waves."

8. B — alliteration (repeated 's' sound)

9. It creates tension and suspense by fronting the description, instead of the plain, flat statement

10. B — "Smoke curled from the dragon's nostrils as it bared its jagged teeth" — uses vivid sensory detail and a powerful verb rather than the plain, generic description

11. Simile ("like a thousand tiny needles") and a powerful verb/personification ("bit" — giving the wind a biting action)

12. A — Racing against time, she sprinted to the finish line

13. A and C (both use a fronted adverbial/phrase for variety; B and D start with the plain subject)

14. Example: "She stood tall, chin lifted, a wide grin spreading across her face."

15. Onomatopoeia — "coughed" and "spluttered" imitate the real, spluttering sound an engine makes, making the description vivid and almost humorous

Standard / Hard

1. A simile compares two things using

6. B and C (personification — the oak

11. A and C ("stumbled" and

'like' or 'as' (e.g. "as fierce as a tiger"); personification gives human qualities or actions to something non-human (e.g. "the fire danced")

2. A — The furious flames flickered fiercely (repeated 'f' sound plus the powerful verb "flickered")

3. "Plummeted" suggests a sudden, fast, uncontrolled fall — far more dramatic and precise than a plain verb like "fell"

4. Example: "The boy bounced on his toes, counting down the minutes until the party began." (accept any valid 'showing' rewrite)

5. B is more effective — it uses powerful verbs ("burst", "bellowed") and sensory detail to immerse the reader in the noise and colour, rather than simply telling us the market was "busy and colourful"

"stretched its arms" and is "whispering"; metaphor — describing the branches as "arms" without "like/as")

7. Personification/metaphor — fear is described as physically "gripping" her, which makes an abstract emotion feel tangible and overwhelming

8. A — Although the bridge looked unsafe, they crossed it anyway

9. A is flat and uninformative; B uses short, punchy phrases and sensory detail to immerse the reader in the bustling atmosphere of the city

10. Example: Simile: "The desert stretched out like an endless golden sea." Personification: "The sun glared down mercilessly on the empty dunes."

"strolled" are precise, vivid verbs; B and D use the plain, overused verb "walked")

12. Simile — comparing the speed of the news spreading to wildfire emphasises just how quickly and uncontrollably it spread

13. A — The floorboards groaned in the silence (the onomatopoeic "groaned" builds tension)

14. The repeated 'm' sound (alliteration) creates a dark, relentless rhythm, while the metaphor of the night as a "monster" makes the silence feel deliberately and violently destroyed, together creating a menacing atmosphere

15. B is better-written — it combines sentences for flow, uses a simile ("like ghostly fingers") and personification ("pressed down"), building atmosphere rather than three short, disconnected statements

Homework — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. C — personification

2. metaphor

3. alliteration (repeated 's' sound)

4. B — The snow was as soft as a blanket

5. Example: "The lion roared like thunder across the plain."

6. onomatopoeia — "bang" imitates the real sound of the door slamming

7. "raced" — shows speed and excitement, more vivid than the plain verb "went"

8. A — Tiny turtles trundled towards the tide

9. A and D (candle flames "danced"; the moon "smiled" — human actions given to non-human things)

10. B — "Roses blazed crimson against the emerald leaves" — uses powerful verbs and vivid colour imagery rather than the plain, vague description

11. onomatopoeia

12. Example: "The sky was a boiling cauldron of grey." (accept any valid metaphor)

13. A — Silently, the fox crept through the hedge

14. personification (trees "bowed" and "groaning")

15. B and D ("seized" and "darted" are precise, powerful verbs; "got" and "went" are plain, overused verbs)

Standard

1. A simile compares using 'like' or 'as' (e.g. "as loud as a market"); a metaphor says one thing IS another

6. A and C (cracked and crunched imitate real sounds; B and D are plain statements)

11. Simile ("as sharp as broken glass") and a powerful verb ("cutting" — giving the voice an almost physical,

(e.g. "the playground was a market")

2. B — The playground was a market

3. Onomatopoeia — "howled" imitates the real sound of the wind, adding atmosphere

4. Example: "\"Watch out!\" he bellowed." / "\"Watch out!\" he shouted."

5. C — Mia's teeth chattered as she hugged her arms tightly

7. Example: "The morning sun stretched lazily over the hills, yawning its first golden rays."

8. B — alliteration (repeated 'f' sound)

9. It creates drama and pace by fronting the phrase, instead of the plain, matter-of-fact sentence

10. B — "The storm ripped branches from their trunks and hurled them across the field" — uses powerful verbs to create a dramatic, specific image

weapon-like action)

12. A — Deep in the forest, an owl hooted

13. A and C (both use a fronted adverbial/phrase for variety; B and D start with the plain subject)

14. Example: "Her cheeks burned scarlet and she stared at her shoes, wishing the ground would swallow her."

15. Onomatopoeia — "groaned" and "wheezed" imitate the struggling, failing sounds of the machine, making the description vivid and almost sympathetic

Standard / Advanced

1. An extended metaphor develops the same comparison across several sentences — e.g. describing an exam as a "mountain": you might "pack your bags" (revise), face a "steep climb" (difficult questions), and finally "reach the summit" (finish), building on the same image rather than using it just once

2. A — The old floorboards groaned and creaked (personification — human-like complaining sounds — and onomatopoeia — words imitating the actual sounds)

3. "Clutched" suggests desperation and a tight, protective grip — far more vivid and emotional than a plain verb like "held"

4. Example: "The dog whined and pawed at its empty bowl, nudging it across the kitchen floor." (accept any valid 'showing' rewrite)

5. B is more effective — it uses powerful verbs ("roared", "surged") and vivid, specific imagery to immerse the reader in the crowd's energy, rather than simply telling us it was "excited"

6. B and C (personification — the fire "devoured" and its tongues are "licking"; metaphor — the flames described directly as "tongues")

7. Personification/metaphor — guilt is described as physically "gnawing", which makes an abstract emotion feel like a real, persistent, painful force

8. A — Even though the path was steep, they climbed on

9. A is plain and tells us little; B uses a simile ("like wild horses") and powerful verbs to create a vivid, almost violent image of the sea

10. Example: Onomatopoeia: "Drums thudded and boomed across the misty field." Extended metaphor: "Dawn was an unwelcome visitor. It crept in slowly, revealing the terrible cost of the night before."

11. A and C ("glanced" and "glared" are precise, vivid verbs that show how someone looked; B and D use the plain, overused verb "looked")

12. Personification/metaphor — hope is described as a small flame that "flickers", suggesting it is fragile and could easily go out

13. A — The stairs creaked with every footstep (the onomatopoeic "creaked" builds suspense)

14. The repeated 'f' sound (alliteration) makes the sentence feel relentless and overwhelming, while the powerful verb "flattened" emphasises the flood's destructive force, together creating a dramatic, urgent image

15. B is better-written — it combines sentences for flow, uses personification ("hush hung") and a simile ("like forgotten ghosts") to build an eerie atmosphere, rather than three short, disconnected statements
