4. she

5. at

6. but

7. mine

8. across

9. A, C and E (and, when and so are conjunctions; above is a preposition, fireplace is a noun)

10. them (also We)

11. above

12. when

13. D — yours (Is = verb, this = determiner, pencil = noun)

14. behind

15. and

Standard

1. that

2. Subordinating

3. herself

4. inside the drawer

5. where

6. A — coordinating

7. me

8. over

9. A, C and E (inside, beneath and over are prepositions; yet is a conjunction, which is a pronoun)

10. who

11. themselves

12. He

13. of (the full preposition phrase is "in spite of")

14. Because

15. which

Standard / Hard

1. "Each" is singular, but "their" is often used as a gender-neutral pronoun; strictly it should agree in number (e.g. "his or her own lunch"), though "their" is now widely accepted in modern usage.

2. It is unclear whether "he" refers to Tom or to his brother, since both are male nouns mentioned earlier in the sentence.

3. Neither … nor

4. Part of a phrasal verb ("look up" meaning to search for) — "up" does not simply show position here.

6. The implied subject of "tired" is "she", understood from the main clause; the subordinate clause cannot stand alone and depends on the main clause for meaning.

7. "So that" — it joins clauses of unequal importance; it is a subordinating conjunction introducing a clause of purpose.

8. Relative pronoun — it refers back to "the dog" and adds extra information about it, rather than joining two independent clauses.

9. "Its" shows possession, e.g. "The dog wagged its tail." "It's" is a contraction of "it is", e.g. "It's raining

11. With "either…or", the verb agrees with the noun closest to it ("sister", singular), so "has" is correct.

12. He and I went to the cinema.

13. "Unless" — it shows a condition; the main clause will happen only if the condition (hurrying) is not met.

14. "Whoever" is a pronoun functioning as the subject of "answered first", meaning "any today."

person who".

5. "Who" is used as the subject, "whom" as the object of a preposition or verb; correct answer: whom.

10. from, onto, beside

15. A, C and E (either...or, neither...nor and both...and are correlative pairs; because and although are single subordinating conjunctions)

15. which

Standard / Advanced

1. "Every" is singular, but "their" is commonly used as a gender-neutral pronoun; strictly it should agree in number (e.g. "his or her own"), though "their" is now widely accepted.

2. It is unclear whether "he" refers to Ali or James, since both are male nouns mentioned before the pronoun.

3. Both ... and

6. The implied subject of "Excited" is "the puppy", understood from the main clause; the phrase cannot stand alone and depends on the main clause.

7. "Because" — it joins clauses of unequal importance; it is a subordinating conjunction showing reason.

8. Relative pronoun — it refers back to "the house" and adds information about it, rather than joining two independent clauses.

11. With "neither...nor", the verb agrees with the noun closest to it ("sister", singular), so "was" is correct.

12. She and I went shopping.

13. "So that" — it shows purpose, linking the reason (leaving the window open) to the result (the room staying cool); it is a subordinating conjunction.

4. Part of a phrasal verb ("switch off" meaning to turn off) — "off" does not simply show position here.

5. "Who" is the subject form, "whom" the object form; correct answer: Whom.

9. "Your" shows possession, e.g. "Is this your book?" "You're" is a contraction of "you are", e.g. "You're going to be late."

10. from, onto, behind

14. "Whoever" is a pronoun acting as the subject of "finishes first", meaning "any person who".

15. A, C and E (both…and, neither…nor and either…or are correlative pairs; since and unless are single subordinating conjunctions)
