Sentences & Clauses

Year 4 Pt 2 — Mark Scheme — Lesson Worksheet & Homework (tutor copy)

Lesson Worksheet — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. Yes — it has one subject (children) and one verb (ran), expressing a single complete idea.

2. Subject = baker; Verb = baked.

3. Yes — it has two independent clauses joined by "and".

4. but

5. Compound — two independent clauses joined by "and".

6. Clause 1: We watched the film; Clause 2: we ate popcorn.

7. Fragment — there is no finite verb showing a complete action for a subject; it is only a participle phrase.

8. sister

9. Yes — it has one verb (slept), even though there are two subjects joined by "and" (a compound subject).

10. explained

11. B — no, it is simple (one clause, one verb)

12. or

13. The boy ran and jumped.

14. A, C and E (all lack a finite verb with a subject, so they are fragments; B and D are complete simple sentences)

15. Compound — two independent clauses joined by the conjunction "so".

Standard

1. Because it was cold

2. Complex — a main clause with a subordinate clause of reason introduced by "Although".

3. The film … is a thriller (with the relative clause "which starts at seven" embedded inside it).

4. When it started to rain, we went inside. (accept similar valid combination)

5. who taught us maths

6. C — complex (a main clause with a subordinate clause of reason introduced by "because")

7. Clause 1: The bell rang; Clause 2: the students lined up.

8. Because it was raining, we stayed inside.

9. before

10. Subordinate — it cannot stand alone and depends on the main clause "everyone left the building".

11. that

12. The match was cancelled because it was raining heavily.

13. A — compound (two independent clauses joined by the coordinating conjunction "yet")

14. A, C and E (Although/Since/that all introduce subordinate clauses; B and D are compound, joined only by coordinating conjunctions)

15. It is a subordinate clause — it begins with the subordinating conjunction "Whenever" and cannot express a complete idea on its own; it needs a main clause to complete its meaning.

Standard / Hard

1. It is a comma splice with an unnecessary extra subject pronoun —

6. It has no finite main verb performing an action for a subject —

11. It is a noun clause, functioning as the subject of the sentence.

"she" repeats "the girl". Correction: "The girl who won the race was thrilled."

it is only a participle phrase. Correction: "The boy was running down the road and shouting loudly."

2. that I bought yesterday; which was on sale.

7. The sentence still makes sense without it: "The dog finally came home" — the middle clause adds extra detail but is not essential to the core meaning.

12. Because both clauses are independent and closely related in meaning, a semicolon can join them without a conjunction: "The rain stopped; the sun came out."

3. A restrictive clause gives essential information needed to identify the noun and has no commas ("who studied hard" tells us which students passed). A non-restrictive clause gives extra, non-essential information and is separated by commas (we already know which sister is meant).

8. Main clause = he entered the haunted house; Subordinate clauses = Although he was scared; because his friends dared him.

13. "whose research changed medicine" — a non-restrictive relative clause, adding extra information about the scientist, marked off by commas.

4. Comma splice — two independent clauses joined only by a comma. Correction: "It was raining, so we stayed inside." (or use a full stop/semicolon).

9. "Despite of" is incorrect — "despite" is never followed by "of". Correction: "Despite the rain, we played outside."

14. A, C and E (all have at least two main clauses joined by a conjunction AND a subordinate clause; B is compound, D is complex with only one main clause)

5. Two subordinate clauses ("Because she was tired" and "because it was late"); both give reasons for the main clause and are introduced by the same subordinating conjunction "because".

10. "When the alarm rang, everyone evacuated the building." (accept similar, using a subordinating conjunction)

15. The first sentence (no commas) means only the injured players did not train (restrictive — identifies which players). The second sentence (with commas) means all the players were injured and none trained (non-restrictive — extra information about all of them).

Homework — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. Yes — one subject (baby) and one verb (giggled), expressing one complete idea.

10. checked

15. Compound — two independent clauses joined by "so".

Standard

1. Since it was hot

2. Complex — a main clause with a subordinate clause of concession introduced by "Though".

3. The cake … won first prize (with the relative clause "which she baked herself" embedded inside it).

4. When the bell rang, the class went silent.

5. who trained us

6. C — complex (a main clause with a subordinate clause of reason introduced by "because")

7. Clause 1: The lights flickered; Clause 2: the room went dark.

8. Because it was raining, we cancelled the picnic.

9. after

10. Subordinate — it cannot stand alone and depends on the main clause "the runners set off".

11. that

12. The trip was postponed because the weather was too dangerous.

13. A — compound (two independent clauses joined by the coordinating conjunction "yet")

14. A, C and E (Though/Until/that all introduce subordinate clauses; B and D are compound, joined only by coordinating conjunctions)

15. It is a subordinate clause — it begins with the subordinating conjunction "Even though" and cannot express a complete idea alone; it needs a main clause to complete its meaning.

Standard / Advanced

1. No — it is a subordinate clause; it begins with "Because" and needs a main clause to complete its meaning (e.g. "Because I was hungry, I made a sandwich.").

2. Restrictive — it identifies which cat is meant (the one that scratched me) and has no commas.

3. Comma splice — two independent clauses joined only by a comma with no conjunction.

4. No — it is a subordinate/noun clause; it needs to be attached to a main clause (e.g. "Whoever arrives first wins the prize.").

5. Phrase — "barking loudly" has no subject of its own; it is a participle phrase describing "dog", not a clause.

6. Main clause = The teacher explained the rule … before moving on; relative clause = which confused half the class (embedded inside the main clause, giving extra information about "the rule").

7. Restrictive (no commas): only the teachers who arrived late missed the meeting — some teachers were on time. Non-restrictive (with commas): all the teachers arrived late and all missed the meeting — the clause just adds extra detail.

8. Comma splice — two independent clauses joined only by a comma with no conjunction. Correction: "The exam finished, and everyone cheered." (or use a full stop/semicolon).

9. Two subordinate clauses ("Since she was exhausted" and "since it was already dark"); both give reasons for the main clause and share the subordinating conjunction "since".

10. It has no finite main verb for a subject — only two participle phrases. Correction: "She sprinted across the finish line and punched the air."

11. The sentence still makes sense without it: "The painting was finally restored" — the middle clause adds extra, non-essential detail.

12. Main clause = she rescued the kitten; Subordinate clauses = Even though she was frightened; because no one else would.

13. "Regardless of of" repeats "of" — this is an error. Correction: "Regardless of the cost, they bought the tickets."

14. A, C and E (all have at least two main clauses joined by a conjunction AND a subordinate clause; B is compound, D is complex with only one main clause)

15. "When the bell rang, the pupils rushed outside." (accept similar)
