Year 4 Pt 2 — Mark Scheme — Lesson Worksheet & Homework (tutor copy)

Lesson Worksheet — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. as bright as the sun

2. slippery, slithered, silently

3. B — metaphor

4. groaned

5. like a cheetah

6. Busy, bees, buzzed, by

7. A, B and D — these say one thing IS another with no like/as (metaphors); C and E are similes

8. danced

9. as cold as steel

10. Wild, winds, whipped, waves

11. B — metaphor

12. C — personification

13. like music

14. Sandy, sat, silently, sea

15. A — Simile (it uses "as...as" to compare the car's speed to lightning)

Standard

1. It suggests the crowd was extremely loud and powerful, comparing their noise to the fierce, powerful roar of lions.

2. Example: "The teacher was a volcano about to erupt." (accept any suitable metaphor)

3. It gives fire the trait of devouring (eating hungrily), suggesting the fire consumed the forest violently and completely.

4. B — Metaphor (it says the moon "was" a silver coin directly, without using "like" or "as")

5. Example: "The wild wind whistled and whirled." (accept any suitable alliterative phrase)

6. It suggests the man's hands were thin, wrinkled, fragile and papery, comparing their texture to dry leaves.

7. A — Simile (it uses "like" to compare her eyes to diamonds)

8. It suggests the city is always busy and active, even at night, as if it never needs rest like a living being.

9. Example: "The sea whispered against the shore." (accept any suitable personification)

10. B, C and E — these give human qualities/actions to non-human or abstract things (personification); A describes movement with an adverb, and D is a simile

11. A — th and r (thunder, thumped; rain, rattled, roof — the repeated harsh consonant sounds create a loud, dramatic, stormy effect)

12. A simile compares two things using "like" or "as", e.g. "brave as a lion". A metaphor says one thing is another, without "like" or "as", e.g. "he is a lion in battle".

13. Example: "She ran like a bullet." (accept any suitable simile)

14. It gives the clock's hands the human ability to race, creating a sense of urgency and time running out quickly.

15. C — Personification ("opportunity", an abstract idea, is given the human action of knocking)

Standard / Hard

1. An extended metaphor continues a single comparison across several sentences rather than using it just once; here, the classroom-as-battlefield idea continues through "weapons" and "the enemy",

6. A, B, C and D — soldiers, steady, silent and storm all start with the soft 's' sound, creating a hissing, tense effect that mirrors the soldiers' careful, quiet movement into danger (marched does not).

11. A — simile; it compares the wind's sound to a wolf using "like". True personification would give the wind a human action directly, e.g. "The wind howled its fury" (without an explicit comparison).

extending the original comparison.

2. A — it uses two unrelated animal comparisons in one sentence, creating a confusing, clashing image rather than one clear, consistent picture — this weakens the writing by distracting the reader

3. It is overused and no longer feels vivid or surprising to readers. A more original simile: "as brave as a firefighter running into flames."

4. "Crept" and "stared" — this personification of the shadows and windows creates an eerie, unsettling, almost threatening atmosphere, as if the house itself is watching or alive.

5. "The rain fell hard" is a literal, factual description, while "The sky wept" is a metaphor that adds emotion and sadness, making the scene feel more dramatic and symbolic of grief.

7. A — a metaphor makes a direct, bold claim that feels more immediate and forceful, while a simile softens the comparison by admitting it is only a comparison

8. B — onomatopoeia and personification, since the machine "coughed" and "spluttered" like a living thing — it makes the machine's struggle to start feel vivid and almost human

9. Overusing similes in a row can feel repetitive and mechanical rather than powerful, and it can distract the reader instead of creating one clear, memorable image.

10. "Despair wrapped its cold fingers around the village" — personifying despair as having fingers that wrap around the village creates a chilling, oppressive, threatening mood.

12. Example: "The exam was a maze with no exit." — this captures the feeling of being trapped, confused and unable to find a way through. (accept any original, effective metaphor)

13. The simile compares the fog to a thief ("like a thief"), but the verb "crept" also personifies the fog by giving it a stealthy, human-like way of moving, combining both devices to create a sense of danger and secrecy.

14. gentle, giant, grumbled, groaned — the repeated soft/guttural sounds echo the low, rumbling noise being described, reinforcing the giant's deep, grumbling voice.

15. Personification makes the description feel more vivid and emotional than a literal statement (e.g. "the bridge creaked because it was old and heavy"), helping the reader imagine the bridge as almost alive and suffering under the weight.

Homework — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. as white as milk

2. gentle, giraffe, grazed, gracefully

3. B — metaphor

4. danced

5. like a fish

6. Ten, tiny, tigers, tiptoed

7. A, B and D — these say one thing IS another with no like/as (metaphors); C and E are similes

8. howled

9. as rough as sandpaper

10. Dark, damp, dungeons, dripped

11. B — metaphor

12. C — personification

13. like silk

14. Cool, crisp, crept

15. A — Simile (it uses "like" to compare the thunder's sound to a lion's roar)

Standard

1. It suggests the children moved suddenly and quickly in different directions, comparing their panic and speed to birds startled into flight.

2. Example: "Her bedroom was a disaster zone." (accept any suitable metaphor)

6. It suggests the pages were thin, delicate and easily damaged, comparing their fragility to dry autumn leaves.

7. B — Metaphor (it says his temper "was" a ticking time bomb directly, without "like" or "as")

11. A — c (cheered, clapped, continuously — the repeated hard 'c' sound creates an energetic, celebratory rhythm)

12. A simile compares using "like" or "as", e.g. "fast as a cheetah". A metaphor states one thing is another, e.g. "he is a cheetah on the pitch".

3. It gives the storm the trait of attacking, suggesting the storm hit the coastline with violent, deliberate force.

4. B — Metaphor (it says the lake "was" a mirror directly, without using "like" or "as")

5. Example: "Rain rattled and rapped on the roof." (accept any suitable alliterative phrase)

8. It suggests the internet is vast, confusing and sometimes dangerous to navigate, comparing it to an overwhelming, tangled jungle.

9. Example: "The mountain watched silently over the valley." (accept any suitable personification)

10. B, C and E — these give human qualities/actions to non-human or abstract things (personification); A describes movement with an adverb, and D is a metaphor

13. Example: "He was as tired as a marathon runner at the finish line." (accept any suitable simile)

14. It gives "hope" (an abstract idea) the human action of knocking gently, suggesting a small, tentative feeling beginning to grow inside her.

15. C — Personification (the alarm clock is given the human action of screaming)

Standard / Advanced

1. It is overused and no longer feels vivid to readers. A fresher alternative: "as busy as a chef during the dinner rush."

2. Giving "opportunity" (an abstract idea) the human action of knocking suggests that chances to succeed can arrive unexpectedly and must be noticed and taken.

3. A — simile; comparing the engine's sound to a lion using "like". True personification would give the engine a human trait directly, e.g. "The engine growled its complaint".

4. A — it mixes two unrelated images (a shining star and a sinking ship) in one description, creating a confusing, clashing picture rather than one clear, consistent metaphor

5. B — personification (with a hint of oxymoron, since silence cannot literally scream) — it gives silence the human ability to scream, creating a powerful, unsettling contrast

6. An extended metaphor continues one comparison across several sentences; here, the negotiation-as-chess-game idea continues through "calculated move" and "trap", extending the original comparison.

7. A, B and C — dragon's, deep and dreadful all start with the hard 'd' sound, creating a heavy, ominous, rumbling effect that mirrors the frightening power of the roar (roar and ground do not start with 'd').

8. "The leaves fell quickly" is a literal, factual description, while "The trees wept their leaves" is a metaphor that adds sadness and emotion, making the autumn scene feel more symbolic and melancholic.

9. "Fear crawled up his spine and gripped his throat" — personifying fear as something that crawls and grips creates a tense, physically threatening, suffocating mood.

10. Overusing similes in a row can feel repetitive and mechanical rather than powerful, distracting the reader instead of building one clear, memorable image.

11. A — a metaphor makes a direct, bold claim that feels more immediate and intense, while a simile softens the comparison by openly admitting it is only a comparison

12. Example: "Nerves were a swarm of bees in her stomach." — this captures a restless, buzzing, uncomfortable feeling of anxiety. (accept any original, effective metaphor)

13. The simile compares the mist to a ghost ("like a ghost"), but the verb "slipped in" also personifies the mist by giving it a stealthy, human-like way of moving, combining both devices to create an eerie, secretive effect.

14. soft, snow, silently, smothered, street — the repeated soft 's' sound echoes the quiet, gentle, smothering nature of falling snow.

15. Personification makes the description feel more vivid and emotional than a literal statement (e.g. "the old floorboards creaked because they were worn"), helping the reader imagine the house as almost alive, tired and complaining.
