Lesson Worksheet — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. did

2. B — an (used before a vowel sound)

3. are

4. so

5. B — walks (agrees with the singular subject "he")

6. an

7. wrote

8. A — and (joins two similar likes, not a contrast)

9. barked

10. an

11. A and C ("are" agrees with plural subjects "we"/"they" — B and D use the wrong form)

12. but

13. finished

14. A and D ("an" is used before a vowel sound in "unusual" and "orange" — B and C wrongly use "a")

15. plays

Standard

1. is

2. B — yet

3. because

4. had

5. A — under

6. at

7. has

8. A — at

9. also

10. was

11. A and C ("hangs on" is the correct fixed pairing for something fixed to a wall's surface)

12. so

13. were

14. A and C ("good at" and "skilled at" are the correct fixed prepositional pairings)

15. if

Standard / Hard

1. were — the subjunctive mood is used for hypothetical/unreal situations after "if", even with a singular subject

2. A — was, because "everybody" is treated as singular in formal English, even though it refers to many people

3. must — it expresses a strong, necessary obligation, stronger than "might" or "could"

6. was (or were) — "committee" is a collective noun; British English allows either "was" (one unit) or "were" (individual members); "was" is most natural here

7. for — "apologised for" is the fixed, correct preposition pairing

8. C — Moreover

11. A and C ("capable of" and "responsible for" are the fixed, correct preposition pairings)

12. consequently — it shows a direct result (traffic diverted because the bridge was closed)

13. had — the subjunctive/hypothetical past tense is used after "wish" to express something untrue or unlikely in the present

4. in — "interested in" is the fixed, correct preposition pairing

5. B — nevertheless

9. is — "one of the plates" has "one" as its true (singular) subject, even though "plates" is plural

10. might — it expresses a possibility, not a certainty, unlike "must" (strong deduction) or "should" (expectation/advice)

14. A and C (with "neither…nor", the verb agrees with the noun closest to it — "staff" and "pupils" are both plural here)

15. to — "similar to" is the fixed, correct preposition pairing

11. A and C

12. so

13. were

14. A and C

15. if

Standard / Advanced

1. were

2. was

3. should

4. about

5. nevertheless

6. A — was, treating the collective noun "jury" as a single decision-making unit ("were" is also accepted if emphasising individual jurors)

7. for

8. Moreover

9. A — is, because "one" (not "windows") is the true subject of the sentence

10. must

11. of

12. A and B (both show that the warning was a direct result of the icy road; C and D do not express result)

13. had

14. A and D (the verb agrees with the noun closest to it — "coach" is singular, "pupils" is plural)

15. A and B ("different from" is the standard, most widely accepted formal pairing; "different to" is common British usage; "different than" is American and "different with" is incorrect)
