Lesson Worksheet — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. D — adverb

2. Example: elated / ecstatic / overjoyed

3. The team's captain led them to victory.

4. personification

5. was -> were

6. Example: modern

7. B — athlete

8. suprised -> surprised

9. A and C (spectacular and relentless are adjectives; fiercely is an adverb, sprinted is a verb)

10. Although it was raining, the match continued.

11. Example: demanding / challenging

12. B — Her determination was as strong as steel

13. I -> me

14. A and C (colons correctly introduce a list or an explanation after a complete clause; B and D place the colon in the wrong position, breaking up the sentence incorrectly)

15. Example: defeat

Standard

1. C — pronoun

2. Example: immense / colossal / vast

3. The coach had one rule: never give up.

4. Personification — the exam papers are given the human ability to "glare", which makes them feel threatening and intimidating, capturing the character's anxiety more vividly than a literal description

5. were -> was ("neither" always takes a singular verb)

6. Example: hesitant / uncertain / insecure

7. A — Unless

8. seperate -> separate; e.g. "The two options are separate and should not be confused."

9. A and C (courage and freedom are abstract nouns — ideas/feelings you cannot touch; table and chair are concrete nouns)

10. The athletes' trophies were displayed proudly.

11. Example: significant / crucial / essential

12. B — The deadline was a shadow looming over her

13. should of -> should have

14. A and C (a semicolon correctly joins two related independent clauses without a conjunction; B incorrectly combines a semicolon with "and"; D uses a comma splice)

15. Example: temporary

Standard / Hard

1. This is an adverb; in "She spoke remarkably calmly", both "remarkably" (modifying the adverb "calmly") and "calmly" (modifying the verb "spoke") are adverbs

2. Example: petrified / paralysed with fear / rooted to the spot

6. Example: scarce / sparse / scant

7. B — which

11. Example: furtively / stealthily / surreptitiously

12. B — The deadline stalked her, patient and certain (gives the deadline a deliberate, predatory, inevitable quality)

3. The novel, which took her three years to write, became a bestseller.

8. irrelevent -> irrelevant; remember it ends in "-ant" like "relevant", since "irrelevant" is simply "relevant" with the prefix "ir-" added

13. have -> has; "each" always takes a singular verb, even though it's followed by "of the candidates" (plural)

4. Metaphor — regret is compared to a physical "stone" that "drags him down"; this layers two ideas together: the weight/heaviness of guilt, and the way it slows and burdens him with every step, making an abstract emotion feel physically real

9. A and C (A uses the subjunctive "be" after "insists that"; C correctly uses "were" for a hypothetical condition; B and D wrongly use the indicative "is"/"was")

14. A and D ("effect" is usually the noun — the result; "affect" is usually the verb — to influence; B and C wrongly swap them)

5. its -> their (or has -> have, consistently); "committee" is treated as plural here ("they haven't announced"), so the earlier verb/pronoun should also be plural: "The committee have reached their decision, but they haven't announced it."

10. The itinerary included three cities: London, which has Big Ben; Paris, which has the Eiffel Tower; and Rome, which has the Colosseum.

15. Example: vague / implicit / ambiguous

Homework — Answers

Easy / Standard

1. D — adverb

2. Example: devastated / heartbroken / grief-stricken

3. The coach's whistle blew sharply.

4. personification

5. there -> their

6. Example: defeat

7. B — runner

8. extremly -> extremely

9. A and C (exhausted and triumphant are adjectives; instantly is an adverb, collapsed is a verb)

10. Despite the heavy rain, the match continued.

11. Example: significant / crucial

12. B — Courage burned like fire in her veins

13. I -> me

14. A and C

15. Example: temporary

Standard

1. C — pronoun

2. Example: immense / colossal / vast

3. The recipe required one key ingredient: patience.

4. Personification — time is given the human ability to "creep", emphasising how slowly it seems to be passing

5. were -> was ("neither" always takes a singular verb)

6. Example: hesitant / insecure

7. A — Whereas

8. seperated -> separated

9. A and C (bravery and honesty are abstract nouns; desk and chair are concrete nouns)

10. The runners' times were recorded carefully.

11. Example: significant / crucial / essential

12. B — Her voice was broken glass, cutting through the room

13. might of -> might have

14. A and C

15. Example: departure

Standard / Advanced

1. This is an adjective; "relentless" modifies the noun "storm"

2. Example: serene / content / at peace

3. The bridge, which had stood for two hundred years, finally collapsed.

4. Simile — loneliness is compared to "an old, familiar coat"; this is a layered image, suggesting loneliness is heavy and ever-present, but also strangely comfortable and worn because he has felt it so often

5. it hasn't -> they haven't (keeping the plural consistent with "have released their"); "band" must be treated consistently as either singular or plural throughout a sentence

6. Example: abundant / plentiful / copious

7. B — which

8. unaccesary -> unnecessary; it has a double 'n' in the middle (une-NN-ecessary) and a double 's' (nece-SS-ary)

9. A and C (A uses subjunctive "be" after "require that"; C uses "were" for a hypothetical; B and D wrongly use the indicative)

10. The team needed three things: a striker who could score; a defender who could tackle; and a goalkeeper who could save penalties.

11. Example: furtively / stealthily / surreptitiously

12. B — The final whistle stalked them, patient and certain

13. have -> has; "each" always takes a singular verb

14. A and D ("effect" is usually the noun — the result; "affect" is usually the verb — to influence)

15. Example: vague / implicit / ambiguous
