Midnight at the Museum

Year 4 — 11+ Homework Worksheet (PassFrame Tuition)

Comprehension | Fiction

Extract — read it carefully before answering

Sam and his sister Priya had never meant to get locked in. They had simply lingered too long by the dinosaur skeletons on their school trip, and when they finally looked up, the rest of their class — and the daylight — had completely vanished.

'We have to find a way out,' whispered Priya, gripping Sam's sleeve as their footsteps echoed down the empty gallery. The museum felt entirely different at night: shadows stretched long and strange across the marble floor, and every statue seemed to watch them as they passed.

They had almost reached the main entrance when a torch beam swept suddenly across the hall, and a gruff voice called out, 'Who's there?' It was Mr Okafor, the night guard, his face breaking into surprise rather than anger when he spotted the two children.

'We got left behind,' Sam explained quickly, his voice wobbling slightly. 'We didn't mean any harm, honestly.'

Mr Okafor chuckled and shook his head. 'Well, you've picked an exciting night to explore,' he said, leading them towards the staff office to call their worried parents. 'Not many people get a private tour of the dinosaurs after dark.' Despite the fright, Sam couldn't help glancing back at the skeletons one last time, secretly rather glad of the adventure.
